and this at an hour of the night when concerted or effective resistance or defense was out of the question, and when detection by identification of the criminals in United States uniform was well nigh impossible. So much for the original crime. A blacker never stained the annals of our Army."

Then, says The Louisville Post, he considers the course of this battalion. He shows that they are not charged with murder, but with shielding those who took part in the original conspiracy, and says—

"These soldiers were not schoolboys on a frolic. They were full-grown men in uniform of the United States Army, armed with deadly weapons, sworn to uphold the laws of the United States and under every obligation of oath and honor not merely to refrain from criminality, but with the sturdiest rigor to hunt down criminality."

"Any assertion that these men were dealt with harshly because they were colored men is utterly without foundation. Officers or enlisted men, white men or colored men, who are guilty of such conduct would have been treated precisely in the same way; for there can be nothing more important than for the United States Army in all its membership to understand that its arms cannot be turned with impunity against the peace and order of the civil community."

This seems a clear statement of fundamental principles. It comes from a gentleman who is arraigned as "a man on horseback," the embodiment of what is called "militarism," who is striving to subordinate the civil to the military authorities all over the country. We are curious to see what the critics of the President will do with this document.

PORTER SPRINGS SURPRISE.

Chevrolet, the automobilist, was talking at Ormond to a New York Press man about American railways, says The Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Your railways are superb," he said. "Abroad we have nothing like them. In speed, comfort, in luxury American railways lead the world."

"But the expense!

"On my way down to Florida I said to the porter as the time drew near for us to part:

"Porter, you have been very attentive, and I want to give you something, but I have no change."

"Then I took out a $20 bill from my wallet."

"Certainly, sir," the porter answered, pulling out a large roll of money. "How will you have it, sir? 'In fives?'"

At the Turn of the Year.

As we enter upon another year, we want to extend our best wishes to all our old friends and customers and to express a hope that the new year may for all be both a happy and a prosperous one. We also want to thank all of those whose patronage has made 1906 both pleasant and profitable for us. That we appreciate your trade we will try to prove by increasing, if possible, the present high efficiency of our service and by using every effort to serve your best interests. We thank you for all past favors, and shall leave no stone unturned to merit a continuance of the same during 1907.

it submits to Congress docu- o the investigation of the con- United States colored troops at re, Texas, containing reports from the inspector General's office. In addition to these documents, there are other matters, showing the precedents in the Army of the United States and in the Confederate Army for the course taken by the President.

The President, from these reports, gives the story of the affray at Brownsville, and declares—

"The evidence proves conclusively that a number of the soldiers engaged in a deliberate and concerted attack, as cold-blooded as it was cowardly, the purpose being to terrorize the community and to kill or injure men, women and children in their homes and beds or on the street,

BEAUTIFUL FOUNTAINS BUILT BY ROMAN EMPERORS.

Water For Them Carried Through Aqueducts Whose Ruins Are Still Standing—Quaint Legend of the Fonte Gaia at Siena.

In the days before water systems were brought to perfection only the rich were able to have private pipes entering their houses or connecting them with the public fountains. Those in the middle class, says the Rosary Magazine, sent their slaves to the fountain to bear home on their shoulders huge jars of water to supply the daily needs, while the common people carried it for themselves.

A long procession could be seen morning and evening winding its way to and from the fountains. Even today in some parts of Rome one sees young girls carrying an old water jar to the fountain, or, in some village of the Abruzzi, others with two jars suspended from a wooden yoke across their shoulders.

The water for the Roman fountains came through the mighty aqueducts which stretched along the Campagna, and of which ruins may today be seen standing grim and splendid against the blue Italian sky.

The Emperor Agrippa alone built 700 fountains, decorating 400 of them with marble columns and 300 with statues, and each Roman emperor seems to have endeavored to outdo his predecessor.

Italy is full of beautiful fountains. One of the most remarkable is the Fonte Gaia at Siena. The carvings are in white marble, the subjects taken from the Bible. The water, cool and pure from a spring 18 miles away, is so limpid that the reflections within its depths are almost illusive, so perfect are they.

There is a little tale connected with this fountain. When the fountain was first built there was great rejoicing in Siena, for it was the first large conduit to be brought into the city, and the people were wild with joy. So much merriment and gaiety went on over the affair that they named it the Fonte Gaia.

Just at this time there was dug up near the city a wonderful statue of a woman, the people called it the Fonte Gaia.

displeased and misfortune has been sent upon us. Let us tear down this pagan thing and good will come of it."

Forthwith they removed the beautiful statue and with much ceremony bore it outside the city gates. Then, desiring to place it where it would do them the most good, they carefully, "with thrifty hatred," buried the statue upon Florentine soil, hoping to transfer their own bad luck to their hereditary enemies.

No one knows where the statue is now, but Fonte Gaia still stands, her water as cool and fresh as when the old Siennese first rejoiced at her building.

Secret Worth Learning.

"You poor man," said Mr. Henpeck, who was for the first time seeing the inside of a lunatic asylum, "how long have you been here? Can you remember?"

"Oh yes; very well," replied the patient; "seven years. You see, they let me do pretty near as I please because I'm harmless."

"Are you married?"

"Sure. I have a wife who used to throw things at me every time I came home."

"How sad. Do you know how a man gets to live?"

"She's getting along all right. I'm a brother, who is a rich bachelor, is in the care of her. He never would let me do a cent, though, as long as I was to work, confound him."

"And what do you do here?"

"Sit around mostly, smokin' waddin' for the next meal time."

"Say," said the visitor, "what's the matter with you?"

"Well, and drawing a big fat patient, "Just betwixt how did you get there?"

POLICE REPORT

What Chief Harry A. Ort's Department Did Last Year

The business transacted by the Police Department for the past twelve months is comprehensively set forth in the annual statement of Chief of Police Harry A. Ort.

It is the first time that a like statement has ever been published in such a concise form, at the same time giving a detailed account of the doings of the Department for the time specified.

A perusal will enlighten the reader in regard to matters he knows not of.

The number of arrests made indicate that the have been vigilant and faithful in the performance of their duties, and that the Department's hands are generally conceded.

The new towboat A. R. Bodd passed down yesterday with a number of barges of coal.

The shaft-breaking season on the steamboats has set in. The Queen City is now on the docks for repairs.

The Joseph B. Williams is on her way up from New Orleans with twenty-nine empty coalboats and eight barges.

The James Moren is bringing several model barges from Pittsburgh for the South loaded with nails, ties and wire.

One of the most successful years in the history of the Ohio has come to a close. The year 1905 was not only a big one in point of big business, but was especially unique by reason of the fact that it was one of the few in twenty years during which traffic continued uninterrupted for twelve months. For once low water failed to get in its baneful work, and as far as local shipments were concerned the ice did not play its usual havoc. All the packet companies report big balances on the credit side of the ledger, while the coal companies have received and sent South an enormous amount of coal. During the past few weeks there has been a falling off in business, but its improvement is certain within a week or two.

MOUNT GILEAD.

Miss Maud Goodman has gone to Portsmouth to visit her brothers.

Mr. O. B. Thomas is making a protracted stay with his son, Charlie and wife, in Chicago.

Mrs. Nannie Singler and sister, Miss Hattie Bell, from Parsons, Kansas, are visiting their uncle, Mr. Howard Farrow.

Miss Lizzie Clay Stone is enjoying two weeks holiday at her home and will return to Bonbon College, Paris, next Sunday.

The wedding of Miss Bertie Lee Calvert, daughter of Mrs. Amanda Calvert, and Mr. Oscar Smith Nace took place near Millcreek last Tuesday night witnessed by a pleasant gathering of kindred and friends, who, after the ceremony by Elder H. B. Blakemore, enjoyed a feast of good things, followed by nice music and many interesting discussions until a late hour, when all pronounced it a pleasure to be there. The bride and groom will go to his home in Ohio in a few days.

There is some complaint of too much rain and mud, but tobacco growers think it delightful weather for handling their crops, greatly encouraged by a prospect of better prices, seemingly brought about by the farmers organizing for that purpose. Since the meeting of the said organization, American Society of Equity, at Winchester last Tuesday, it is reported that the required percent of the tobacco

Rev. Simms, Presiding Elder of this District for the M. E. Church, South, preached a number of sermons here the first part of the week, which were greatly enjoyed by those who heard them.

A little child of Aurelius Fite fell a distance of twelve or fifteen feet Sunday last, striking on its head and producing concussion of the brain, while playing in his father's barn. Dr. Irvine was called and rendered assistance.

Bruce, son of Rev. Sam Pollard of Cincinnati, who has been spending the holidays with relatives and friends here, will return home the latter part of this, or the first of next week. He will be accompanied home by his cousins, Carter and Roy Hamrick, sons of John and William Hamrick, to spend a few days in the city.

Thomas B. Fite, a young man residing near here, while in the employ of the R. E. Wood Lumber Company at Barwine, McDowell county, W. Va., while in the act of coupling cars, had his left foot so badly crushed as to necessitate the amputation of a part of it and his three smaller toes and the sole of the foot and a portion of the heel. He has been returned to his home, and is under the care of Dr. Burdick of this place, who reports his patient doing nicely.
